About this time an organ, a Mason & Haudin, used until superseded by the present organ two years ago, was purchased, Miss Dudley working diligently to secure the funds and the rector being a large contributor. At Easter, 1884, the parish resolved to purchase the lot of land in the rear of the church for $1,462, and $700 were pledged within a month toward the cost. The parish also relinquished all financial help from the diocesan board of missions. In this year the parish suf-fered the loss (by his removal to Lexington) of Mr. Albert Griffiths, of whose uniform courtesy, ability and faithfulness they make a record.

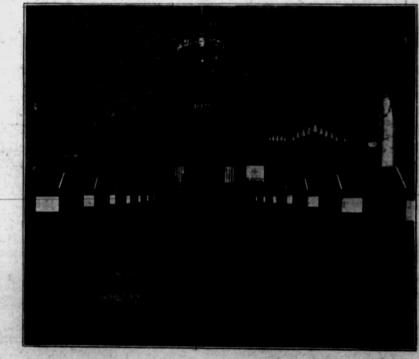

The executors of Mr. Price (Mr. William Wilson and F. J. Rogers) reported that his property after the death of his wife and of his grand-daughter, was bequeathed one half to the Roman Catholic and one-half to St. John's church.

In Feb., 1883, Mr. Addison tendered his resignation which was reluctantly accepted by the parish at Easter, and he accepted a call to Christ church, Fitchburg Ketchum accepted a call to become the rector. #### THE DEATH OF QUEEN VICTORIA.

In the death of Queen Victoria, England has lost the most distinguished of her long list of sovereigns, and the world has lost a woman who was at once the pride and glory of her sex. Coming to the throne at an early age, the late queen through these long years of her reign so ruled with that rare combination of justice and love that she endeared herself to all hearts alike. She was a pronounced factor in the administration of public affairs throughout her dominion. Her sympathies were ever on the side of right. Her throne and her royal robes never came between her and the best interests of her subjects. She never lost sight of her people through any ceremony, however grand and imposing, or through any formal etiquette of state or crown, however exacting. Under the wise and beneficent rule of Queen Victoria, her reign so extended itself as to embrace four hundred millions of loyal, loving subjects. She saw things clearly and she acted wisely. She never allowed royalty and the applause of the world to impair or in any way to interfere with her abounding common sense.

But the 63 years and more of her magnificent reign are known the world over, so it is that we especially write of Queen Victoria, the woman, who so glorified and sanctified home life that the whole civilized world "rise up and call her blessed." How she adorned and made attractive all wifehood! How she gave to all motherhood a divine interpretation! How sweet and rare was that love which the queen and her husband, Prince Albert, had for each other! How she lived for him, and how constantly anxious she was that the nobility of England should give him full recognition! Yes, she sincerely loved Prince Albert while living, and never did she cease to mourn his death. While Queen Victoria was the most distinguished of sovereigns, she was still more distinguished as a woman in her home life. Let it ever be said to her everlasting praise that she gave those nine children a cordial welcome to her home and to her great motherly heart. In spite of the many exacting duties of the queen she vet found time to personally care for and rear the children. She practi; cally recognized that the home is the underlying basis of all governments. What a healthful lesson her life as a wife and mother is or should be to the American people: Eighty-five children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren, and seventy-one of these now surviving! The life of the English people gladly and with becoming pride perpetuates itself, while the alarming cry on this side of the waters is that our American life is growing less and less in count, so the danger is that the American people may substantially become at no distant future an extinct race. God pity, although he cannot forgive, that wife who is not willing to bear in her own person the children whom God so purposely sends. Love of offspring should be taught in many an American home.

What a touching and impressive scene was that dying hour of the loving and beloved queen, with nearly every descendant of her family line gathered about her bedside! The home in such a presence was greater than throne or crown. Queen Victoria will live forevermore in history as having answered God's infinite purpose and plan for all womanhood. However exalted as a ruler, Queen Victoria will throughout all time be far more exalted as a wife and mother whose life centred and lived in that of her husband and her children.

FRIDAY IS OUR DAY. Yes, we know that Friday is hangsman's day, but in spite of this fact the Enterprise is in future to go to press so early on that day that it will from this date on be found for sale at each newsroom in Arlington early on Friday evening. We no longer believe in signs and wonders. We are quite willing at our time of life to see the new moon over our left shoulder, and no longer does it trouble us if we happen to break the best mirror in the house. #### "BOARDING 'ROUND."

The district school 'way back in the country has been robbed of much of its sentiment and poetry since "boarding round" has so entirely gone out of date. In our earlier teaching we found a temporary home with the families represented in the district; and in this sort of omnipresent life there were many advantages. First and foremost of all, it brought the teacher in closest touch with the daily home life of the pupils, We remember very distinctly and with much pleasure, how, when a boy in school, we counted the days before the schoolmaster would come into the family to board for a little time more or less. His advent into our home life was an event which made a count on the plus side in our school days.

Many a teacher fails in these later days in his or her school instruction because there is no coming together in a social way between the instructor and the pupil to be instructed. The teacher must necessarily enter into the daily life of the children if he would attain a real, lasting success. Life must touch life at every vital point in order to beget life. The personality of the teacher does not now make itself felt upon the children as it did years ago. We have so exalted the goodwill of his subjects. With a and glorified methods and all that which big, generous heart, he is socially at goes to make up that which is known as least democratic in his tendencies, and the red-tape way of doing things that it is hoped and expected that in his the children have become hidden under official robes as king he will continue a multiplicity of mere, useless forms. near to his people through his rule over Our instruction in these boasted days of them. Albert Edward has ever disadvanced learning ends for the most played a loyal love for his mother, the part with the day. While he has had little to boyhood, every one of them, stand out do with active political life, and while with a marked individuality, and largely hardly anything is known through any for the reason that they got near to us public expression of his of his political in the home. In these days we remember the "machine," while we forget the teacher or the man or woman who turns the crank.

Indeed, there were lots of good work lone in the country district school in the remember those 17 different homes we had that winter in which we taught our first school. And never shall we forget what a picnic it was for us and the children during our stay in each of those families. We lived upon the very fat of the land, while at night we rested our weary selves in the best bed and in the best room in the house. A half-century ago there was nothing too good for the schoolmaster; so if the fatted calf was stuck and dressed just before the arrival of the teacher. In 'boarding 'round' of the best.

But it is of the social life of the home that we most desire to speak. Then the teacher became intimately acquainted that the new king of England will try with every family in the neighborhood, and they with him, so that they soon he follows in the steps of his illustrious found that their interests were mutual. Each answered back to the other, so that rule that his four hundred millions of the school and the home substantially entered into a coparthership. In those days there were no cold, monthly reports sent home for the parents' signatures, but what was far better, each had so intimate a knowledge of the other that the daily life and progress of the school were well known by the father and mother without any long process of ciphering out the standing of the individual pupil. There was not only sentiment and poetry in "boarding 'round," but there was much practical good came

But whether we "board 'round" or otherwise in these days of improved pay, for didn't we get back that lost kid methods, there should be an intimate glove which we advertised in last week's ineness of our early conversion. #### AN UNDIGNIFIED PASTIME.

Vice-President - elect Roosevelt is hardly engaged in a dignified pastime in hunting and shooting game, however wild and ferocious, in the uninhabited regions of the west. We are coming more and more to believe that no one has a right to take life for the mere sake of killing outright. But let this be as it may, it hardly comports with the dignity of a vice-president to play and act the rough during his leisure days. It is a good deal evident that Roosevelt delights in fistic encounters, and indeed in all that which belongs to a face-toface fight. We believe the example of the ex-governor of New York in this direction is altogether wrong and destructive in its tendencies, so that we a good deal sympathize with that literary society at Andover Philips Academy which recently passed resolutions condemning Roosevelt's thirst for blood. The example of the vice-president-elect one for our boys and young men.

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH ANNIVERSARY.

The 25th anniversary of the organizaion of St. John's Episcopal church, which occurred on Sunday morning. was an occasion of unusual interest The Rev. Dr. Hutchins of Concord, who was for a brief while rector of the church in the early eighties, preached the morning sermon. We especially desired to hear Dr. Hutchins, as he was for a time our classmate both in the academy and in the college, but we then had not been fumigated, so was compelled to forego the pleasure of listening to the rev. doctor.

The present rector, the Rev. James Yeames, gave an interesting htstorical review of the parish in the evening, as will be seen in another column. St. John's church is fortunate in having a rector of such pronounced ability and so persistent in his work as is the Rev. Mr. Yeames. We congratulate our Episcopal friends on their continuous and growing prosperity.

It is now 835 years since William I. ascended the throne of England, and days of "boarding round." We vividly following him there have been 36 accessions to the throne, so that Edward VII. now comes on the long list of those who have ruled over the mightiest empire the world has ever known. The family relationship existing between the different governments of Europe ought to ensure a peaceful rule among them for all time. King Edward's wife and the wife of the Czar of Russia are sisters, being daughters of the King of Denmark, while the present Emperor of not killed, the fattest pig was sure to be Germany is the grandson of the late queen and so a nephew of King Edward VII. If there is any good coming from one was bound to have his fill, and that being members of the same family then the powers of Europe ought to dwell together in harmony.

At anyrate it will be safe to assume for the things that make for peace. If mother all will be well. May he so subjects shall shout aloud in good faith, "Long live the king."

The Old Maids' Convention.

The well-known play, "The Old Maids' convention," was given for the first time in Arlington by the members of the Y. P. C. U. in the vestry of the Universalist church last Thursday evening. An idea of the plot of the play is conveyed in the title. It is a convention of maiden ladies gathered to consider the welfare of their particular part of the female sex. After the convention has been called to order and the routine business transacted, speeches are made in regard to the position of woman in the world. Great interest is manifested when one delegate speaks of the wonderful invention of Prof. Blinkensop. The convention moves to "adopt" the professor, and he is sent for. In due course of time he arrives and illustrates the workings of his machine by making the maiden sisters over into whatever form of human life they

The play was a success in every way. The production was rich in fun, and the "get up" of the members was "out of sight." Many of the garrets of Arlington have had a thorough dusting during the last week. A crowd was present, many being obliged to stand.

The play was given under the direction Mr. L. K. Russell, he having, however, no part in the play. Mr. W. H. N. Francis kindly, from his rich experience, offered many valuable suggestions to the young people, and was present at the production. Mr. Jerome Smith was stage manager. The following is a list of those who took part: President, Miss Mabel Rich; secretary, Mr. Fred Butterfield; treasurer, Miss Russell; other delegates, Ethel Butter; field, Mrs. F. B. Wadleigh, Mrs. Jerome Smith, Agnes and Edith Woodbury, Helen Kimball, Martha Durgin, Helene Johnson, Florence Cobb, Miss Law; Prof. Blinkensop, Mr. Henry A. Leeds. Special artists: Singer, Mrs. T. E. Blake of Cambridge; reader, Miss Crawford of Boston; violinist, Miss Clara Johnson golf girl, Miss Helen Bott; boy and girl, Osgood and Harriet Holt; picaninnies, Master Law and Miss Law; pianist, Mrs. Fister.

After the play was over a flashlight was taken. The company, this early, have received an invitation to give the play in Cambridge.

the Rev. C. M. Westlake, who remained till Jan. 7, 1896. The Henderson street Misson was given up early in 1895, the rooms being taken for other purposes. In Feb. 7, 1896, the Rev. W. S. W. Raymond accepted the call of the parish to become its rector, and entered upon his Offices work after Easter. In August, 1897, Mr. Raymond resigned to become asso ciate rector of Grace church, So. Boston where he is now the sole minister-incharge. On Dec. 1, 1897, the present rector entered upon his duties. During Mr. Raymond's rectorate the church was shingled and the Parish house was painted and colored.

is not for me tell the story of the last three years. I would rather speak of the future than of the past. Your eyes see and you are familiar with what has been done by united effort, under the blessing of God. The removal of the unlovely heater which disfigured one corner of the church, the instalment of heating apparatus in the basement, the painting of the church within and without, improvements and adornments, and, chief among all, the purchase of the beautiful pipe organ which aids so much in the service of praise—in these evidences of progress we thankfully rejoice. They represent an expenditure of some $1500, half of which has been already paid, pledges of $400 toward the balance being on hand.

Let me repeat and emphasize the appeal of the preacher of this morning for a fervent and vigorous spirituality given the life of God in the souls of the people and all the rest will follow.

this growing town. Among those who come with the thousands who will aug ment the population in the next decade of years will be those who as members of the Anglican communion of the Catholic church, children of the mother Church of England, Ireland, Scotland and Canada will naturally come to kneel at this altar. Others, tired of the dis-tractions of sects, and of the independence which, abandoning all forms, is in greatest danger of formality, will come hither to find in our ancient and simple creeds, in our reverent and inspiring modes of worship, in the sobri-ety and tolerance of the church and the fullness of its scriptural teaching, the rest and nourishment for which their spirits long and hunger. I believe that St. John's parish has a bright and promising future. I look for the day when these walls shall become too strait, and during surroundings the church shall gather its children and perpetuate its

The parish reunion at St. John's on Monday evening was an entire success. About 170 persons were present, among them some who were the first members of the parish, 25 years ago. Two of the Sunday school teachers who were at the opening of the school, Oct. 17, 1875, were present. One who was one of the first baptized in the church was among the guests. Several former vestrymen were also present.

A delightful organ recital was given during the first half hour by Miss D. A. Swadkins, organist of the church. The following program was played with great taste and skill:

mpromptu, Op. 41, No. 1, Fantaisie, sur des Nöels, No 1, Tombelie Mozart Larghetto, Festal March in C, Calkin

Brief congratulatory addresses were made by the Revs. Dr. Abbott, C. J Ketchum, Frederick Pember, W. S. W. Raymond and E. A. Rand. The Rev S. C. Bushnell spoke for the ministers of other denominations.

The ladies of the parish served ice cream, etc., in the Parish house, which was beautifully adorned with lace curtains, flags, rugs, growing plants, etc.

The occasion was a most happy one, and the rector was the recipient of unnumbered congratulations. The Rev. Mr. Yeames said that 280 persons had been haptized and 211 confirmed during the history of St. John's. There are now about 120 families in the parish, representing 350 souls, with 120 communicants. The parish has raised and expended in the town about $30,000, its contribution of money, to say nothing of work, witness and prayer for the moral and spiritual betterment of the town of Arlington during 25 years.

Patrolman McGuire found a horse and harness on the side of the street on Mass. avenue, near the Arlington line, on Thursday evening, Jan. 17. The horse was extremely exhausted, and as there was no owner in sight he put him under the care of Dr. Alderman, where he remained under treatment until taken home by the owner, A. H. Sibley of Cambridge on last Wednesday. The horse, buggy and harness was stolen from Mr. Sibley's stables on the morning of the same day that Officer McGuire found him. On the following morning Officer Foster found a grain bag and whip near where the horse was standing, but the thief and buggy are still missing. Any information regarding one or both of them will be gladly received by the Lexington police.

The entertainment of the Follen church on last Thursday evening gave the people of the village an opportun ity of listening to a continual flow of vocal and instrumental talent of a high order which was thoroughly appreciated by everybody present, each of the several persons on the program being encored in the most enthusiastic manner the clapping in each case con tinuing while the least hope of a reappearance remained in the minds of the audience. The body of the church was fairly well filled with people although the slippery walking undoubtedly dettered quite a number from venturing out that would otherwise have attended. Mr. George E. Foster was master of ceremonies and at the close of the evening announced that there would be a ing of Feb.7. Together with the concert everybody will be afforded an opportunity of witnessing the taking and reproduction of records right on the spot? This will undoubtedly draw a large audience. Remember the time Thursday evening, Feb. 7.

The Baptist society held their first supper and entertainment last Wednesday evening in Emerson hall. The supper tables were all ready at six o'clock and the accommodating waiters were kept busy waiting on the patrons for fully an hour and a half before the last of the large crowd were taken care of. The price of the supper was ten cents, and the variety and quality of the dishes offered for that small sum was the first surprise of the evening As the people got through supper they took their places in the entertainment hall where they held an experience party before the commencement of the exercises. Everybody responding, with few exceptions, recited their experience in verse that would lower the aspirations of a spring poet. Misses Edith and Lillian Sim and Mr. Emerson McDonald sang in a very creditable manner. Mrs. F. R. Brown of Somerville favored the audience with three different songs and was vigorously 'encored. Miss Grace Cookson of Charlestown was the "star" of the entertain. ment, her recitations deservedly drawing forth the strongest applause from the audience. Miss Edna Sim also recited very acceptably. Mr. John H. Wright played admirably on the clarionet accompanied on the piano by his little daughter, Miss Pearl. The readings of Mr. Eddie Torrey were received very favorably. Hymn "God be with you till we meet again" was sung by the audience. The Rev. J. H. Cox closed the exercises by complimenting the society on the success of the evening and giving a short history of its earlier struggles and hinting at the future possibility of a new church, closing his remarks with a benediction. Arlington, Mass., Jan. 11, 1901.

The attention of the property owners of this town who have any trees or shrubbery on their premises is called to the spread of the Browntail Moth throughout this town. Owing to the rapid increase of this insect in the last two years especially in the south-easterly section of the town, comething must be done to top the spread of this destructive pest. This cannot be done without individual interest being shown on the part of citizens owning trees, erc. The tree warden will have his hands full to take care of this insect on the trees of the public highways without having to contend with the spread of the same from private property. The home of the Brown-tail Moth can be easily distinguished this time of the year by what is known as a tent on the tips of twigs. These tents are made by drawing together a few small leaves and lining them with a mass of silken threads. They are so firmly fastened to the thigs that they cannot be removed without using considerable force. The most effective method of destroying this insect, probably, is to cut off these tents on the tips of the branches during the winter months. As the caterpillars are hibernating in them at this time, they must to cut off these tents on the tips of the Franches during the winter months. As the caterpillars are hibernating in them at this time, they must be burned at once. The tents or webs are unsightly objects, and are easily seen at this time of the year. The pear tree seems to be the favorite food plant of this insect. The number and variety of other food plants to which the insect adapts itself indicates that it may become a very serious pest to a wide range of fruit and shade trees. It will not require but a small amount of time and labor to do this work on places having a few trees, and farmers and owners of large estates generally have help enough employed to make a short piece of work of this matter.

Longavita, THE TABLET OF LIFE.

(Pilula At Longan Vitam.) The Scientific Discovery of the Age! The Magic Key to the Mystery of Life!

The Magic Key to the Mystery of Life!

From time immemorfal it has been man's predominating ambition to prolong Life. But among the many brilliant minds who have devoted their lives to the fascinating subject it was left to the immortal Darwin to give to the world, in his great theory of Life, the finidamental principle upon which to build all further research in this direction. Following closely in his footsteps came Prof. Dr. Ludwig Buechner, a German scientist of international renown, with his remarkable work entitled "Das Buch des Langen Lebens" (the book on Longevity). But alas, like Darwin, he too died ere he could reap the fruit of his wonderful doctrine. Others, however, equally great took up the interrupted thread, with the result that two famous German scientists, after years of experiments and research, have at last discovered the secret of Longevity, in the shape of a remarkable Vegetable Compound, which, if properly used, will positively prolong Life. This new remedy, appropriately named "Longavita" (meaning Long Life) has been subjected to the most rigid tests at all the leading clinics and hospitals throughout Europe with marvelous results. Appreciating the importance of this discovery, we have acquired, at enormous cost, the exclusive proprietary right to this truly wonderful preparation, which has proved a blessing to mankind. "Longavita" is the true Tablet of Life, a rejuvenator par excellence, embodying the vertiable secret of Longavity in a practical, feasible form. It is the fountain of perpetual youth, which it prolongs far beyond its present limits, while retaining health in a perfectly normal state. "Longavita" brightens the eye, stimulates mental activity, gives elasticity to the step, makes the face full, absorbs wrinkies, cleanses the system, purifies the skin, and is the only true Ponce de Leon remedy for old and young of both sexes. Endorsed by Europe's leading physicians.

A WOMAN'S COQUETRY.

.....By M. Quad.

COPYRIGHT, 1900, BY C. B. LEWIS.

For five years I had been the keeper of the elephant Jamrock. In summer we traveled with the circus, and in winter we either had quarters on a farm or in some zoological garden. Jamrock had taken to me from the first, but you must know that an elephant is as capricious as a woman. For a month at a time the big beast would be as humble as a kitten and as loving as a child, and then all of a sudden he would pout and sulk and perhaps seek to do injury. There were two weeks in every year when I actually feared him. From the 1st to the 15th of February he had the temper of a devil. During this interval he was securely chained and every precaution taken when approaching him. He would stand for hours swinging his head to right and left, and then suddenly scream out in a way to make you chill. It would have been as much as my life was worth to have got within reach of his trunk. These spells always lasted two weeks, and then Jamrock was his old self again and under complete con-

THE TIGER MAN WAS THRUSTING AT ME. etc., are kept on half salary, These people make up a colony of 25 or Peirce & Winn Co In this fifth year of my keepership of pleased. Jamrock I was in love with little Zara, the tightrope performer. She was the daughter of Professor Irwin, the lion tamer, and he frankly told me that he favored my suit. I was a young man ahead, and I had reason to believe that Zara returned my love. Things between us would have been settled before we took the road again but for her spirit of deviltry. While she was not a flirt, she was more or less of a coquette. Every good looking girl is, for that matter, but here was one who received the praise and applause of hundreds of thousands, and, while she had not been spoiled, she had come to think pretty well of berself. When "the tiger man" came, she set out to make me jealous and have a quarrel or two before surrendering her rights. This tiger man was named Norton. He had a cage of three performing tigers, and he joined us in winter quarters about Feb. 1 to get ready for the spring opening. He was a man of 30, rather good looking and well fixed financially, and I will do him the justice to say that it was no flirtation on his part. He fell in love with Zara, and when she seemed to encourage him he was clean gone. He soon discovered that I had claims, and there was open enmity between us. It was not my fault. While I felt a little sulky over the girl's conduct. I did not doubt her loyalty to me and pursued the even tenor of my way. It was Norton who at once became insanely jealous of me. He was a man of violent temper, and it wasn't three days before we quarreled. This pleased and amused Zara, and none of the rest of the staff regarded it as a serious

The animal quarters were in one great house, divided off by half way partitions. At the east end of the building came Jamrock first of all, and just over the partition was the cage of the three tigers. There were alleys running north and south and east and west, and once a beast got loose be could wander over the whole floor. My elephant had his annual mad fit on, and he was secured to the floor by four chains. I slept in a rough bunk 40 feet down the alley, so as to be on hand should he try to break away There had been only the one quarrel between Norton and I, and no blows had been struck in that. He had exhibited a fierce temper. but had not threatened my life. As we went about our duties we passed and repassed each other, but there had been no more words. On the night of the 9th of February, after a day's anxiety over Jamrock, who was unusually ugly, I turned into my bunk and after a time fell asleep. I had slept three hours when awakened by a clutch at my throat, and as soon as I opened my eyes I found Norton bending over me. He had a grasp on my throat with both hands, and his intentions were to strangle me. We were pretty evenly matched as to strength, and though he had taken me unawares desperation helped me to break his clutch and throw him off. As I flung him clear of me he drew a knife. I had no weapon, and was crowded into a narrow bunk, but I used my pillow as a shield and he buried his knife into it several times as he struck at me.

At the end of two minutes I knew that I must have help or lose my life.

We were alone in the great shed, and after the choking I had received my voice would not carry across the building. In the dim light I saw that Jamrock was watching us, and that his eyes were ablaze. I had no hope that he could break his chains, and I knew that he would kill us both if he did, but yet I called out to him. He answered with a scream, and throwing all his weight on the chains he snapped them as if they had been old clotheslines and came dashing down the alley. The tiger man was thrusting at me and cursing below his breath, and the point of his knife had drawn blood three or four times. As he heard the beast coming he turned to look, but he had no time to escape. With a sweep of his trunk Jamrock knocked him down, and then lifting him up again the body was battered against the beams right and left until it was reduced to pulp. I did not try to leave the bunk, being almost helpless, and hoped the elephant would go away after a bit. When he had given the body a fling down the alley, he picked me out of my bunk and carried me back to his stall. I expected death, but he let me down on the straw with care and stood over me. I remained quiet for 15 minutes and then tried to creep away, but Jamrock brought me back so roughly that I dared not try it again.

It was morning before any one came to us, and you may be sure there was great excitement. It was Zara who finally approached the elephant with food and distracted his attention while I got away, and later on we opened the doors and let him out into a field where he could do no more damage. It was an affair that never reached the newspapers, and two weeks after the incident a wedding was quietly celebrated in our quarters. Why Jamrock, who had often tried to kill me when his fit was on, should have spared me on this occasion has always been a puzzle to me. Perhaps the one victim took the edge off his temper, or it may be that he remembered our long friendship and conquered his desire to slay. Be it as it may, I mourned him almost as a brother when he was killed in a railway accident the following year.

Keep Up With the Times.

One should be familiar with the current news of the day and the topics occupying public attention, with the names and authors of new books, and be able to say something worth hearing about what one has read and heard. Many get no further in speaking of a book than it is dull or interesting. Others give it few words that seem to be its central idea, its characteristics, the time and scene of its action quoting perhaps some sentiment that has impressed or witticism that has

True culture carries with it an atmosphere of breadth-the world and not the village. A woman lacking it was said to betray by her conversation a mind of narrow compass, bounded of good character, had fair prospects on the north by her servants, on the east by her children, on the south by her ailments and on the west by her clothes. The mind grows shallow when occupied perpetually with trivialities. A course of solid reading is a good tonic. When ignorant of our ignorance, we do not know when we betray ourselves .-Philadelphia Press.

Mushroom Culture by Ants.

In The American Naturalist Professor Wheeler describes a genus of insect living commensally with certain ants. The general reader will, however, be specially interested in the so called "mushroom gardens" formed by the ants in question. It appears that they cut and transport into their subterranean cellars large pieces of leaves, which are there divided into smaller fragments and ultimately reduced to a fine pulp. "This pulp is heaped up and soon becomes invaded by the mycelium of a fungus. The mycelium is kept aseptically clean-i. e., free from all species of fungi and even from bacteria-and induced to grow in an abnormal way by bringing forth minute swellings which constitute the only food of the ant colony. Moller likens these swellings to the 'kohlrabi' of the German kitchen gardens."-Nature

Odd Death Certificates.

Certificates of death are not documents where one usually seeks for humor, but there is frequently to be found in them much of the unconscious variety. Here, for instance, is how the cause of death is stated in the case of a laborer:

"Died from injuries received through a bull accidentally kneeling on his chest." The consideration shown for the feelings of the bull is a fine touch and suggests grave questions on the moral responsibility of the lower animals.

Again, a man is stated to have "died from the effects of injuries received after being run over by a railway train in motion, owing to a misunderstanding between deceased and an engine driver." This description of a rather ordinary railway casualty is excellent.
